This is a pipe – Text by Cristianne Rodrigues

A piece of gas pipe, a battered old faucet, an old TV antenna: it is often in the trash that the crack addict finds something to improvise a pipe when an urgent need to smoke invades him. This greed, in Brazilian fissura, drives thousands of people every day to Cracolandia, the world's largest outdoor crack smoking site, located in Sao Paulo.

This place which, in the 19th century, had seen the opulence of a rural oligarchy linked to the culture of coffee, is today nothing more than a ghost district in the heart of the megalopolis.

Of its flamboyant past, all that remains are dilapidated mansions and the railroad that carried
